WEDNESDAY, JULY 11
PRE-PROGRAM WORKSHOPS

Leadership and Its Teaching

Chair: Ronald A. Heifetz, John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University
9:30 am - 3:30 pm Fee: $20

Over the last seven years, the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard has been experimenting with leadership education in courses developed by Ronald Heifetz. So far, these efforts appear to have had some success. Indeed, both executive and graduate students at the School generally consider the leadership courses to be among the most valuable they get at Harvard. This workshop will use a presentation of the content and teaching strategy of these courses as a means to generate a thoughtful discussion about educating people for leadership.

The workshop will be roughly divided into two parts; content and method. The morning session will focus on the conception of leadership presented in the courses. In addition to presenting course material, the discussion will examine the differences among various theories of leadership and their prescriptive implications to the practitioner.

In the afternoon session, our attention will turn to the teaching methods employed in these courses. In particular, we will examine (in part experimentally) three teaching techniques: 1) Using the class as a case-in-point, 2) Analyzing student case studies, and 3) Musical improvisation exercises. The discussion will focus on developing a rationale for matching a leadership teaching method with the content it attempts to convey.

Conflict and Cooperation in International Organizations: An Experiential Workshop

Chair: Jerrold M. Post, M.D., The George Washington University
8:30 am - 3:45 pm Fee: $35

This experiential workshop will focus on the inevitable conflicts which occur when national actors, groups, and individuals, each with their own priorities and agendas, attempt to cooperate in the context of an international organization. Drawing on the contributions of Wilfred Bion and the model of the Tavistock Institute/A.K. Rice Institute Human Relations Conferences, the workshop will clarify the manner in which destructive group and organizational dynamics can interfere with achieving organizational effectiveness and cooperation. While the focus of the workshop is on the group, individual participants may experience some psychological stress during the workshop.

The workshop will be under the overall direction of Dr. Jerrold Post, Professor of Psychiatry, Political Psychology, and International Affairs, The George Washington University; Pamela Pomcrance Steiner, Department of Psychiatry, Harvard Medical School, will be Associate Director. Members of the workshop staff will be: Dr. Rafael Moses, Sigmund Freud Professor of Psychoanalysis, Hebrew University; Dr. Karen Norberg, President, The Center for the Study of Groups and Social Systems, The A.K. Rice Institute; Dr. John Woodall, Department of Psychiatry, University of California, Irvine.

Understanding Ethnicity-Techniques for Dealing with its Conflicts

Chair: Vamik D. Volkan, M.D., Professor of Psychiatry, University of Virginia and Medical Director, Blue Ridge Hospital
1:00 pm - 3:30 pm Fee: $15

In recent years Dr. Volkan has been involved in a variety of interdisciplinary meetings on the subject of ethnic and national relationships, including the relationships between Arabs and Israelis, Greek and Turkish Cypriots, Northern Ireland Catholics and Protestants, and Americans and Soviets. Through his work as director of The Center for the Study of Mind and Human Interaction he has organized several series of meetings involving two influential groups in conflict brought together with a third neutral group acting as a catalyst. From his observations at these meetings he has developed formulations on the psychodynamics of this particular group process, and the specific rituals that occur at these gatherings, i.e., the accordion and echo phenomena, the mourning process, and the narcissism of minor differences.

This half-day workshop will include the application of findings from clinical practice to large group processes, using object relation theory as the basic theoretical focus.

It will also include:

How ethnic groups relate to each other in peace time and under stress.

Examples from bringing together members of opposing ethnic groups.

The role of third, neutral parties.

Discussion, questions and answers.
