Welcomes from...

President Fred Greenstein

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt dispatched the man he had defeated for president two years earlier—Wendell L. Willkie—on an around-the-world good will tour which included visits to the Soviet Union and China. Upon his return, Willkie published a best-selling book entitled One World (1943), which contained an eloquent plea for international cooperation. Ironically, “one-worlder” became a term of derision during the near half-century of East-West confrontation that followed World War II. But now that the Cold War is over, we can all be one-worlders—and proud of it! That is particularly true of members of international societies like this one, which now can be truly global in their reach. In that connection, I take particular pleasure in welcoming you to an ISPP conference that could not have taken place when the ISPP was founded. Welcome to Kraków and welcome to the global village.

Conference Chair Adam Niemczyński

Kraków is a very old city. It was incorporated into the Polish state in the 10th century, but archeological findings indicate that the Wawel Hill was inhabited in the early Stone Age and that Slavonic tribes settled here in the 7th century. Educational institutions have been located here since the first cathedral school in 1150. In 1364, Kazimierz the Great founded the Kraków Academy, which was the beginning of what later became Jagiellonian University. For 200 years, the city was the capital of the Polish territories, beginning with the reign of King Wladyslaw Jagiello (1386). The University was refounded and modernized in 1400 under a donation from Queen Hedwig and King Ladislaus Jagiello, from whom it received its present name. A monument to the king, located in Matejko Square, was founded in 1910 by pianist/politician Ignacy Paderewski. Among the University's most famous students have been Nicolaus Copernicus (1491-95) and Pope John Paul II (1938-39, 1942-46).

Kraków is a city of 800,000 in which is to be found a vast array of valuable historical landmarks, and we hope that you will set aside some time during your stay here to see a few of these treasures. (Visitors from the Western Hemisphere may be interested in the famous Jagiellonian Globe, the first to show America, located in the Museum in Collegium Maius on Jagiellonska Street.) The city is also the site of many cultural events and culinary pleasures which you should sample when you are not taking advantage of the impressive array of fine panels and presentations which have been composed for this 20th meeting of our Society. We take pride in welcoming you to our city and university, and hope that you will enjoy your visit here. If we can help make your stay more pleasant, please do not hesitate to let us know.

Conference Director Aaron Belkin

On behalf of the entire conference staff, I would like to welcome you to Kraków and thank you for participating in our 20th Annual Scientific Meeting. I would also like to offer special thanks to Adam Niemczyński, Fred Greenstein, Pamela Johnston Conover, Donald Searing, and Denis Snook for organizing this conference and for arranging a terrific program of panels and events. If you have any problems, please feel free to contact one of us. We will do our best to make your conference experience a pleasant one. Also keep in mind the locations of upcoming ISPP conferences:

1998:	Montréal, July 12-15
1999:	Amsterdam, July 18-21
2000:	Seattle (dates tba)

These are all spectacular destinations and I very much hope to see you at each of them. It has been a pleasure serving the Society as Conference Director for the past five years, and I am confident that ISPP will be pleased with the care and organizational skill that will be brought to future conferences by the new Director Matt Hakemi of the University of British Columbia.

Program Co-Chairs Pamela Johnston Conover and Donald Searing

We are pleased to present the fruits of many months of juggling and organizing that have gone into this year's program. The call for papers on the theme of “Political Psychology in the Post-Cold War World” was answered by the vast array of papers, symposia, and roundtables which appear in the following pages, and we will rest easy that we and the authors have done our jobs if you experience severe conflict while trying to choose which of the many stimulating panels to attend. Special thanks go to Jennifer MacGillivray for her thorough and conscientious work on the program in the midst of other claims on her time. We are confident that the Kraków conference will be a memorable intellectual experience that will redound to our collective benefit in the years to come.

Alfred Freedman Award for the best paper at the 20th Annual Scientific Meeting

Panel chairs at the 1997 Annual Meeting are invited to nominate a paper from their panel for the Alfred Freedman Award given to the best paper at the annual scientific meeting. Send the nomination and a copy of the paper to the chair of the Award Committee: Richard G. Braungart, Department of Sociology, Syracuse University, Syracuse, NY 13244-1090 USA. No papers will be considered which have not first been recommended by a panel chair. The Committee will contact nominees to supply additional copies to the Award Committee.

ISPP Book Display

Welcome to the 11th consecutive ISPP Exhibition of Books and Conference Papers. ISPP is pleased to bring to you this opportunity to examine and purchase books directly from the largest international exhibit devoted to current work in political psychology.

Please look for the sign at conference registration directing you to the exhibition. In general, the exhibition will open 30 minutes before the first scheduled event of each conference day and close 30 minutes after the convening of the last panel discussions. However, hours may vary, so please consult notices posted in the exhibition area.

ISPP thanks the following exhibitors for choosing to display their latest titles relevant to political psychology at our 20th annual meeting. Their participation through the years has made a valuable contribution to the growth and development of ISPP and political psychology. Names in bold are exhibitors with advertisements in this program.

Call for Papers and Symposia ISPP 21st ANNUAL SCIENTIFIC MEETING

Montréal, Canada
 12-15 July 1998

Program Chair: Jon A. Krosnick
 Ohio State University

Address all correspondence regarding the program to:

Professor Jon A. Krosnick
 Department of Psychology
 The Ohio State University
 1885 Neil Avenue
 Columbus, OH 43210 (USA)

Phone (614) 292-3496
 Fax (614) 292-5601
 E-mail krosnick@osu.edu

The theme of this meeting is "Identities and Interests at the Close of the Century: The Contribution of Political Psychology." Besides submissions that address any aspect of this theme, the program will also cover the full range of theory and research in political psychology. International and interdisciplinary panels and events are strongly encouraged.

The ISPP program consists of papers, symposia, roundtables and workshops. Those submitting proposals should specify the category into which their proposal fits.

Papers

Proposals for papers should include the following:

- i. Name, professional affiliation and complete addresses (mail, telephone, fax, and e-mail) for each and every author of the paper;
- ii. Formal title of the paper; and
- iii. A 150-word abstract of the paper.

Groups of related papers, by different authors, are encouraged; each author should submit a title and abstract and the information requested in (i) above. The program chairs reserve the right to add papers, grouping papers into sessions according to topic.

Symposia

A symposium consists of a group of closely coordinated papers by different authors that are designed to address a particular issue or problem, usually with one or two discussants. Proposals for symposia should provide the same information as for papers for each participant including the symposium chair and discussants. The program chair reserves the right to add papers to a symposium proposal. Those who propose a symposium are responsible for arranging the participation of all symposium members and submitting the required information for each participant.

Roundtables

A roundtable is a more informal discussion among people of contrasting or complementary points of view. Although roundtable participants do not write formal papers, proposals for roundtables should include the same information as for a paper (see above) for each participant. Those who propose roundtables are responsible for arranging the participation of all roundtable members. Participants may be required to present brief opening statements.

Workshops

A workshop is an extended session involving some kind of participation, application, or demonstration. Size is limited; there is advance registration and a fee for participants. Proposals for a workshop should include the name, professional affiliation, and complete mailing address, telephone, fax, and e-mail of the organizer with a title and reasonably full description of the activity.

General Information

Offers to chair paper sessions or serve as a discussant are welcome. Please indicate your area of expertise and interest, and provide a full address.

The deadline for submitting proposals to the program chair is 9 January 1998, but earlier submission is urged, especially if you need a formal letter of invitation after your proposal has been accepted. Participants will be expected to arrange their own travel to Montréal.

The preliminary program, along with pre-registration materials (including accommodations and travel information) will be mailed to all ISPP members and those participating in the 21st Annual Scientific Meeting in late March 1998.

Understanding the psychological aspects of national and international political developments is increasingly important in this time of international tension and sweeping political change. Political Psychology is dedicated to the analysis of the interrelationships between psychological and political processes. This quarterly draws on diverse sources, including psychological anthropology, cognitive psychology, clinical psychology, economics, history, international relations, philosophy, political science, political theory, psychology of personality, social psychology, and sociology. In addition to substantive, full-length scholarly articles, the journal publishes analysis and commentary on important issues, bibliographic essays and book reviews.
