Welcome from . . .

President David Winter

Welcome to Amsterdam and the 22nd Annual Scientific Meeting of ISPP! We are meeting at the end of an extraordinary century. Over the past hundred years the forces of globalism and localism have created an unprecedented dialectic of communication and conflict, highlighting the need for civility.

It is appropriate that we are meeting in the Netherlands. Centuries ago, the Dutch played an important role in the globalization of capitalism. One hundred years ago, the first International Peace Conference was held in The Hague. More recently, the Dutch have fostered internationalism and communication across borders. The Netherlands is also a place where people of diverse and deeply-rooted local loyalties live in civility, tolerance, and civic consciousness.

I invite you to join in our scientific program as we reflect on these themes from the unique interdisciplinary perspective of political psychology. At the same time, I hope you will take time to appreciate the very special arts, architecture, and atmosphere of our host city, Amsterdam. Welcome!

Conference Co-Chair Christ'l de Landtsheer and Bert Klandermans

For the second time, ISPP is holding its annual meeting in Amsterdam. Those of you who attended the first Amsterdam meeting will find the city as exciting and permissive as ever. If you are in Amsterdam for the first time, give yourself time to explore the town. Settle down on a terrace at the Leidseplein. Take the canal-tour; that will give you the best view of the monumental houses. Take a streetcar from east to west and you will travel through a wide variety of cultures.

Amsterdam, like any big city, is a melting pot of cultures and lifestyles, and it is worth experiencing some of it. For those who don't want to take time off, we have added interesting bits of Amsterdam and the Netherlands to the program: the struggle against the water, Dutch policy on refugees, drugs, prostitution, and euthanasia. On the light side, we are proud to have been able to secure the Amsterdam Historical Museum for the reception. This will be an opportunity to learn about the city's past, and we hope to see you there. The local organizing committee wishes you a fruitful and productive meeting.

Conference Director Mat Hakemi

On behalf of the entire conference staff, I would like to welcome you to Amsterdam and thank you for participating in our 22nd Annual Meeting. I would like to take this opportunity and give a special thanks to Christ'l de Landtsheer, Bert Klandermans, Sam McFarland, Dana Ward, and David Winter for their efforts in putting together an exceptional program of panels and events. It was a pleasure to work with everyone this year and feel the enthusiasm and energy that helped put this conference together. Christ'l and Bert have done a terrific job with events in the social program and I hope that you will get the opportunity to attend most of them. Please recognize Judy and Susan Franzblau from Global Events, our professional meeting planner for Amsterdam. Judy will be at the registration desk for the duration of the conference; feel free to ask her the whereabouts of ISPP officers at the meeting. I am sure that you will find plenty to do in Amsterdam but if you have any problems, or need suggestions for restaurants or entertainment in Amsterdam, please see Christ'l, Judy or myself. Also, keep in mind our future ISPP conference destinations:

2000: Seattle, USA July 1-5

2001: Cuernavaca, Mexico TBA

2002: Berlin, Germany (tentative) TBA

These are all spectacular destinations and I hope to see you there!

Program Chair Sam McFarland

With more than 500 participants representing about 40 countries, the 22nd Annual Scientific Meeting is perhaps ISPP's largest. Likewise, the range of topics is broad, and participants will find many intellectually enriching panels and presentations.

Two assistants at Western Kentucky University merit special gratitude. Suzanne Forman handled much of the correspondence and helped bring many panels to completion. Meanwhile, Mary Ann Woosley prepared a preliminary file of the panels and presentations, maintained records, and double-checked virtually everything along the way.

ISPP colleagues Shana Levin, Christine Pappas, Karen Stenner, and Allen Wilcox read an early draft of the program to identify scheduling problems. Their willingness to help should mean that those who want to attend several sessions on the same topic will experience fewer conflicts. Christ'l de Landtsheer, Bert Klandermans, Mat Hakemi, David Winter, Dana Ward, and Heather Gillespie all provided seamless cooperation and support.

Serving as program chair has enabled me to become acquainted with many new colleagues in the study of political psychology, and I am very grateful for that.

Enjoy!

Alfred Freedman Award for the best paper at the Twenty-second Annual Scientific Meeting

Nominations are invited for the Alfred Freedman Award given to the best paper at the 1999 Annual Scientific Meeting. Program chairs are encouraged to consider the papers in their panels and to nominate any that they believe merit consideration. Presenters may also nominate their own papers. Send the nomination and a copy of the paper to the chair of the committee: Helen Haste, Head of Department of Psychology, University of Bath, Bath BA2 7AY, England, E-mail: h.e.haste@bath.ac.uk, TEL: +44 1225 420230, Fax: +44 1225, 482046. The committee may ask nominees to supply additional copies as needed.

Workshop I: A New Approach to Understanding Nationalism and Esperance Ethnic Conflict: Adaptive Cultural Mourning

Coordinator: Jeffrey Stevenson Murer, University of Illinois at Chicago

The literature on nationalism has long been dominated by two diametrically opposed approaches: essentialism and instrumentalism. While both have rich explanatory power, neither offers a course of conflict amelioration. The approach presented in this workshop offers a dialectical synthesis of the two dominant schools, overcoming the common privileging of time -- that ethnic conflicts are either exclusively rooted in the past or in the present, and overcoming the common privileging of collective action -- that ethnic conflicts are either purely emotional responses or rational action. In order to achieve this Hegelian Aufhebung, it is necessary to synthesize two theoretical approaches: critical theory and psychoanalysis. This workshop offers a three-step method to deconstructing ethnic conflict, provides the requisite vocabulary to understand the interplay between critical theory and psychoanalytic theory on a collective level, and introduces courses for conflict amelioration and resolution. Participants will be introduced to methods for initiating dialogue between conflicting parties and evaluating the prospects for cultural healing.

Workshop participants registered in advance will be invited to submit working papers on nationalism and ethnic conflict which will be examined and discussed during the workshop. Selected papers will then be compiled into an edited volume.

Workshop II: A Psychodiagnostic Approach to Assessing Political Personality and Predicting Leadership Performance
Meerman I

Coordinators: Aubrey Immelman, Saint Johns University
Blema Steinberg, McGill University

After a brief review of the major approaches to political personality assessment, we will demonstrate our method of coding psychodiagnostic data extracted from publicly available information and constructing personality profiles compatible with conventional psychodiagnostic procedures of personality assessment. Our approach is informed by the conceptual model of Theodore Millon, which offers an empirically validated taxonomy of adaptive personality patterns and their maladaptive variants, congruent with the syndromes described on Axis II of DSM-IV.

Workshop participants will receive an inventory of diagnostic criteria, a manual with scoring instructions and interpretive guidelines, practical examples of assessment protocols, and hands-on instruction in administering the inventory. We will also provide guidelines for reconceptualizing the assessment results in terms of the five-factor model of personality, Dean Keith Simonton's five dimensions of presidential style, and James David Barber's fourfold typology of presidential character.

Workshop III: Using Experimental Exercises and Experiments to Better
Meerman II Understand How People Make Political Judgments and Decisions

Coordinator: Helen E. Purkitt, U.S. Naval Academy

This workshop examines how experimental exercises and experiments can be used to better understand how people make political judgments and decisions. Attendees will participate in three exercises and then compare these results with relevant past findings. These exercises include: a framing exercise based on prospect theory, a political judgment experiment entitled "Beauty and the Politician," and a small group experiment that requires participants to make recommendations about how to spend a budget surplus in a mythical, modern nation-state. This experiment replicates one conducted in the 1980's. Each of these framing exercises will serve as a point of departure for discussions of how different types of experimental exercises can be used to learn more about how people think about and make decisions about politics. Participants will receive the materials necessary to use these exercises for their own teaching or research purposes.
