

October's New and Featured Titles from Cambridge Scholars

On the 15th of October, join Cambridge Scholars in marking the birthday of one of the most challenging and controversial figures in the history of philosophy – Friedrich Nietzsche. Born on this day in 1844, Nietzsche's influence spans the entirety of the Humanities and Social Sciences, and he continues to be turned to by scholars seeking new ways to understand the world over a century later.

At Cambridge Scholars, our books on Nietzsche and his philosophy are at the forefront of academic debate, and we are offering our readers a 50% discount on five of our most recent titles that explore different aspects of his thought. To read more, please click here.

Our October discount campaigns, with a time-limited discount of up to 60%, include:

Book of the Month – Our October Book of the Month is Reflections on Contemporary Values, Beliefs and Behaviours: The Adventures of an Enquiring Mind, by Prasanna Gautam. The book is a wonderful and wondrous philosophical journey through a number of different topics, and we are pleased to offer our readers a 60% discount when purchasing it. Please click here to see more.

Our Editorial Advisory Board's 'Recommended Reads' – Michele Fontefrancesco has chosen his 'Recommended Read', Becoming an Anthropologist: A Memoir and a Guide to Anthropology by Gerald Mars. A vivid, funny, and honest autobiographical narration of Mars' own path to anthropology, we are offering a 50% discount on Michele's pick. Please click here to read more.

Featured Review – This month, we are proud to feature a new review of Gillian Alban's The Medusa Gaze in Contemporary Women's Fiction: Petrifying, Maternal and Redemptive. The reviewer concludes that "what makes the study exceptional is the passionate voice of a feminist scholar who wants to reach those outside academia." Please click here to read more.

Forthcoming Titles, New Releases and Best Sellers – As always, our editors have chosen nine of our new, forthcoming, and bestselling titles to place front and centre on our website. Please click on our homepage to view the selection.

Happy reading!