

The 1st Gothenburg-Barcelona workshop on experimental political science

The workshop brings together researchers who use experimental methodologies to address political phenomena. We welcome contributions from any subfield of the discipline. Papers can be empirical studies, methodological contributions on experimental design or analysis, or works that explore the relationship between experimental and observational data. Both senior and junior scholars are encouraged to participate. It is our ambition to develop this into an annual arrangement that alternates between Barcelona and Gothenburg.

The workshop will accommodate about 14 papers over the course of two days. A keynote lecture will be delivered by professor Neil Malhotra (Stanford University).
