

As of January this year, the Political Studies Association of the U.K. is now home to a specialist group on political psychology: The Political Psychology Specialist Group of the United Kingdom (PPSG-UK).

The PPSG-UK is a multi-disciplinary group established to provide a forum for collaboration, discussion and support for political psychology scholars and practitioners and well as to facilitate the dissemination of political psychology research to relevant political and social institutions and the broader public. In the near future, we plan on integrating this group with a sister group currently being established in the British Psychological Society. If you are interested in joining and are a member of the PSA, please feel free to submit a membership request via the PSA website. If you are a non-PSA member who wishes to join, please email Dr. Kris Dunn at k.p.dunn@leeds.ac.uk. This group does not charge any membership fees. The group's website can be found at <https://www.psa.ac.uk/psa-communities/specialist-groups/political-psychology>.
