WELCOME LETTER
From the President

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF ENCOUNTER AND THE POLITICS OF ENGAGEMENT

Welcome to the 38th Annual Scientific Meeting of the International Society of Political Psychology. My best wishes to each of you for a productive conference and an enjoyable stay in San Diego.

The hard work of preparing the academic program has been undertaken by Melinda Jackson and Clifford Stevenson, ably assisted by Philip Chen. Melinda, Clifford and Philip have been superbly professional in their organization of this year’s conference, and they have been supported by the following section heads: Ryan Beasley, John Garry, Stephen Gibson, Debra Gray, Richard Hermann, Shose Kessi, Samara Klar, Shelley McKeown, Kristen Monroe, Michael Morrell, Anthony Sapountzis, Jaime Settle, David Smith and Jolanda van der Noll. As a former section head, I know how much creative energy and time goes into this task and so I thank each of them.

The administrative work of putting the conference together has been expertly handled by ISPP’s Executive Director, Sev Bennett, and her assistant, Heather Schlabach. Coordinating with the conference hotel and overseeing the management of the conference, from the website to the details of room allocation and timing of events, Sev and Heather have been diligent in creating what promises to be a superb professional program with attractive opportunities for socializing and relaxing.

The ISPP Summer Academy continues under the innovative leadership of Director, Tereza Capelos and administrative assistant, Stavroula Chrona. This year’s Summer Academy will be the final one for Tereza and Stavroula. Having seen this outstanding forum of political psychology flourish over the past few years, I express my gratitude to Tereza and Stavroula, and my admiration for what they have created and developed.

Each year, we honour our colleagues with a range of ISPP Awards. I thank each of those ISPP members who have served on the various Awards committees, notably the Committee Chairs: Leda Blackwood, Cengiz Erisen, Leonie Huddy, Richard Lau, Anca Minescu, and Michael Morrell. Their efforts have generated an impressive range of award recipients, and I look forward to joining you in honoring them as they receive their awards.
This past year has seen the publication of a new handbook of political psychology. Catarina Kinnvall, Tereza Capelos and Henk Dekker have joined me in co-editing the Palgrave Handbook of Global Political Psychology. Effective February, 2015, Catarina has also taken over as the new Editor-in-Chief of our flagship journal, Political Psychology. For the next five years, the editorial work of the journal will be administered through Lund University's Department of Political Science. Joining Catarina are new Co-Editors John Cash, Caroline Howarth, Orla Muldoon, Martin Rosema and Thomas Rudolph. The new Associate Editors are Emma Bäck, Hanna Bäck, Martin Bäckström, and Jacob Sohlberg. Kristen Monroe continues as Book Review Editor and Sarah Scuzzarello is the Editorial Manager. I wish Catarina and her team best wishes for continued success with the Journal. I also express my gratitude to former Editor-in-Chief, Alex Mintz, and his editorial team for their work on behalf of the journal over the past five years.

As we look ahead to the future of our highly-regarded and high-impact journal, our planned Annual Meetings in Warsaw (2016), Edinburgh (2017), and San Antonio (2018), as well as our increasingly professional Central Office and internal communications networks, I thank you for your continued membership in ISPP. If you are just becoming a member this year, you could not have chosen a better time to join, and I encourage you to join us in building the society into the future. Your continued membership is vital to the success of our shared goals. For this reason, we have geared our membership fees and conference registration fees to meet the needs of all scholars, according to their ability to pay. We are a society that is determined to sustain our membership, but also to grow beyond our traditional areas of membership strength in North America and Western Europe. That is why we are devoting over half our discretionary small grants budget this year to seeding political psychology beyond these continents. We are actively seeking ways to build bridges and increase our membership on a truly international scale. Please join us in this endeavour as you renew your own memberships, encourage colleagues to join us, and encourage those who have been members in the past to renew. Most importantly, please continue to bring your ideas regarding internationalization and other policy matters to the ISPP table.

Paul Nesbitt-Larking
ISPP President
WELCOME LETTER
From San Diego Program Chairs

WELCOME TO THE 38TH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY OF POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY!

We are delighted to welcome you to the 2015 ISPP conference in San Diego. Its scenic and temperate location on the Pacific coast makes the city an ideal place to host this year’s event and we hope you enjoy your time here.

This year's conference theme is The Psychology of Encounter and the Politics of Engagement, which captures something of the timeliness as well as the impact of the research to be discussed at this event. In addition to the panels which speak to this central theme, our international board of section chairs have compiled an exciting program organized in 11 sections, featuring paper panels and roundtables. There is also the central poster session which, after the success of this session last year, has been extended to run over two days during the conference. We encourage poster authors to leave their posters up throughout the majority of the conference for other attendees to peruse during breaks, and there is dedicated time during which you can ask authors directly about their work (1:00pm – 3:00pm on Saturday).

The program also features a superb range of keynote addresses. In addition to the Presidential Address by Prof. Paul Nesbitt-Larking (Huron University) we have keynote addresses by Dr. Nick Hopkins (University of Dundee) and Prof. Leonie Huddy (Stony Brook University), recipient of the 2014 Nevitt Sanford Award. This year’s recipient of the Markwell Media Award, author and journalist, Chris Mooney, will also give an invited address. As in previous years, we feature a number of events with a focus on junior scholars, including a Mentoring Lunch and Junior Scholars’ Social Hour. Also, with the recent change in the editorial board of the journal, Political Psychology, we feature a roundtable discussion with members of the board on publishing research in the journal.

We encourage everyone to engage in the discussion and debate afforded by this superb program and also to communicate your experiences to others in your networks. Please follow the ISPP_JSC Twitter feed, and join us in posting about the conference (interesting sessions, social events, paper links, etc.) using the hashtag #ISPP2015.
This conference is a truly collective accomplishment and so we would like to take this opportunity to thank all of those who have been involved in its production. We first wish to thank our international team of section chairs who reviewed over 500 proposals and organized these into panels: Ryan Beasley, University of St. Andrews, UK; John Garry, Queens University Belfast, UK; Stephen Gibson, York St-John University, UK; Debra Gray, University of Winchester, UK; Richard Hermann, The Ohio State University, U.S.; Shose Kessi, University of Cape Town, South Africa; Shelley McKeown University of Bristol, UK; Michael Morell, University of Connecticut, U.S.; Anthony Sapountzis, University of Thrace, Greece; Jaime Settle, College of William & Mary, Virginia, U.S.; David Smith, University of Sydney, Australia; Jolanda van der Noll, Fern Universität in Hagen, Germany; Chris Weber and Samara Klar, University of Arizona, U.S.; and Kristen Monroe, University of California Irvine, U.S. Some undertook this challenge single-handedly while others coordinated their efforts across (and sometimes between!) continents. We are deeply grateful for their efforts and for the timely completion of their roles.

Particular thanks go to Sev Bennett, Executive Director of ISPP, whose constant work and guidance over the year made sure that everything ran smoothly and that every challenge was anticipated and overcome. We are also very grateful to Paul Nesbitt-Larking, President of ISPP, for inviting us to be the Program Chairs and for his advice along the way. Finally, Phil Chen (PhD candidate at the University of Minnesota) has this year served a second term as Program Assistant. Phil’s skills and experience were vital at every step of our planning process – many thanks for his continued support.

We especially wish to thank those who submitted such an exciting array of proposals which allowed us to compose this year’s program and to all who have made it to San Diego for the event itself. Enjoy the conference and have a fantastic stay in San Diego!

Melinda Jackson and Clifford Stevenson
2015 Program Chairs
Welcome to the 38th annual meeting of the International Society of Political Psychology in sunny San Diego! This year’s event, The Psychology of Encounter and the Politics of Engagement, promises a wide variety of innovative and inspiring research presented by junior and senior scholars from all over the world. I am pleased to announce that this year the Junior Scholars Committee (JSC) has organized a number of exciting events, which we hope you will attend.

On the first day of the conference we begin with the JSC Mentoring Lunch, arranged by JSC Mentoring Program coordinators Gary Smith and Stavroula Chrona. Over lunch, registered mentees and mentors will have the opportunity for small group discussion between emerging and senior scholars. Mentees will have the opportunity to discuss their research and to get specific advice on their scholarly work. We hope that the mentors and the mentees keep in touch during and after the conference.

On the following days of the conference the JSC Professional Development coordinators Gizem Arıkan and Emma O’Dwyer will hold two exciting roundtables focusing on professional development. The roundtables are intended to initiate a wider dialogue between emerging and senior scholars. The first roundtable reflects the diversity of the very organization; Doing Interdisciplinary Research in Political Psychology will help emerging scholars think about the challenges and opportunities for cross-discipline collaboration, including how to seek partners and find finding. The second roundtable will be the Challenges of the Post-PhD Career; the goal is to build on last year’s topic of navigating the job market as well as help junior scholars think ahead to what early career goals may be and how to achieve those.

At the end of the busy Saturday program, we will hold the Junior Scholars Social Hour offering an informal opportunity for networking among peers in a relaxed atmosphere. Always well-attended, the social hour is a great place to meet old friends, as well as new ones! Drinks will be provided. See you on Saturday, July 4 at 5:00 PM.

Please join us to congratulate the 13 ISPP junior scholar members who were awarded this year’s Travel Grants, a mechanism designed to provide assistance emerging scholars to attend this conference.

In addition, JSC social media coordinators Shelley McKeown and Kanica Rakhra continue to manage several online services. Especially for this year’s conference we created a #ISPP2015 to facilitate the exchange between conference participants during and after the event.
Follow the ISPP Facebook page (facebook.com/ISPPJuniorScholars) and Twitter (@ISPP_JSC) to stay up-to-date regarding upcoming call for papers and funding opportunities. As always, we appreciate any comments, advice or feedback on how we can best serve you, you can reach us at jsc@ispp.org.

Finally, I would like to thank to all members of the 2014-2015 Junior Scholars Committee. It has been wonderful to be working with such an enthusiastic and talented group of junior scholars!

Enjoy the conference and your stay in California!

Crucibles of Identity: The Political Psychology of Collective Events
Nick Hopkins (Dundee)

Our group-based social identities shape our commitments and social relations with others. Accordingly, political psychology needs to address the processes through which these identities are produced and maintained. Durkheim famously proposed that collective events constitute contexts in which social bonds are re-vivified and community identities reproduced. Although anthropologists and sociologists have said much on the social and political functions of collective participation, the need for a psychological level of analysis remains pressing, and in this talk I will discuss how political psychology can contribute to the analysis of collective events. Specifically, I will describe the results of a programme of research conducted at one of the largest mass gatherings in the world – the Magh Mela at Allahabad, north India. This annual event attracts millions of Hindu pilgrims who live on the banks for the Ganges for a month. I will describe the social and political significance of this religious event and report analyses based on longitudinal survey data, interview data, and ethnographic observation. These data illustrate the social psychological processes shaping participants’ encounters with others and how the experience of these encounters feeds back into participants’ social identifications (even after the event is over). I will also consider the processes through which the meaning of these identities is contested by the various social and political organisations that attend the event and seek to recruit popular support. Taken together these data show how collective events can be crucibles in which politically important social identities are re-produced and defined.

Reporting on Social Science
Chris Mooney (The Washington Post)

In this talk, I will outline what I have learned in reporting extensively on social science research, including what I’ve learned about how you – the researcher – can better interact with the media.

The Psychology of Encounter and the Politics of Engagement
Paul Nesbitt-Larking (Huron University College)

Among the central challenges facing communities, nations, and the global community in recent years has been the growing tendency toward patterns of social and political exclusion, the building of barriers and the enforcement of borders, stigmatization and segregation of minorities, breakdowns in communication among diverse peoples, and the construction of parallel societies. Among other consequences, these trends have conditioned psychological stress and intergroup conflict. This presentation will consider how research findings in political psychology might address these challenges, notably through the study of contact, dialogue, recognition, care, ethical responsibility, integration and cosmopolitanism.

Monday 6 July, 1:30 -2:30 PM, Salon AB
Partisan Identity in Diverse Democratic Polities
Leonie Huddy (SUNY at Stonybrook)

A psychological attachment to a political party remains a powerful influence on political behavior within developed and developing democracies. Indeed, it is the likely psychological glue that ties citizens to a political system, giving them a stake in elections and maintaining their interest in ongoing political disputes. It is thus surprising that research on the psychology of partisanship had languished in recent decades and is only now being revisited in a theoretically and empirically rich fashion. I focus on partisanship as a social identity, examine its strength as a function of attributes of specific political parties, provide evidence on the existence and power of coalitional identities in multi-party systems, and contrast instrumental and expressive approaches to research on its nature in a series of survey experiments. Overall, this research sheds light on the dynamics of partisanship in different political systems and provides evidence of its continued political relevance.

Robert Sigel Junior Scholar Paper Award 2016

The Roberta Sigel Award has been given since 1998 to Junior Scholar authors of the best papers presented at annual scientific meetings. Professor Sigel, whom the award honors, was a Distinguished Professor of Political Science at Rutgers University. She was author and editor of seven books and numerous articles and book chapters, primarily in the areas of political socialization and democratic citizenship. She held many leadership roles in the American Political Science Association and served as Program Chair, Vice-President, and President of ISPP.

Eligibility and nomination process

Junior Scholars who are currently members of ISPP and have had their paper accepted for the most recent annual meeting are eligible to be considered for the award. Junior Scholars are defined as graduate or undergraduate students as well as faculty members who received their Ph.D. within the last eight years.

There are two Sigel Awards given per year with slightly different criteria to accommodate the authorship and publication practices in the various disciplines represented in ISPP:

1) An award for the best paper authored solely by one or more Junior Scholars.

2) An award for the best paper for which the lead author is a Junior Scholar; it is acceptable (but not required) for one or more co-authors to be senior scholars.

Meeting attendees are encouraged to nominate papers in each of these categories, and self-nominations are welcome. Members of the award committee are also invited to submit names of especially deserving candidates.

Committee structure and evaluation process

In consultation with the Executive and Junior Scholars committees, the President appoints the Chair of the Roberta Sigel Award Committee before the annual meeting. The Chair of the committee and the President choose at least three ISPP members to form a committee with a view toward disciplinary, geographical, gender, and age balance. Any inquiries should be addressed to the Chair of the award committee:
If possible, members of the committee are asked to attend the annual meeting for which they are responsible, in order to attend presentations and identify potential nominees. Once a list of nominees is generated, committee members will read and discuss the papers and issue a decision. (The Committee Chair is asked to inform the Executive Director and President of ISPP before notifying winners.)

Timeline

Nominations are due by January 15 of every year, and the winner is notified by April 30.

Award information

Both awards come with a $250 cash prize. Award recipients also receive a certificate from the society and are strongly encouraged to attend the annual meeting and the Awards event.

A list of past winners can be found here: http://www.ispp.org/awards/sigel
Best Dissertation Award Announcement 2016

The Best Dissertation Award has been given since 2008 for the best dissertation in political psychology filed during the previous calendar year.

Eligibility and nomination process

All Ph.D. dissertations within the substantive area of political psychology are eligible for consideration, regardless of home discipline. Dissertations should represent an independent piece of research and gain the highest degree at the author’s university. Dissertations must be completed and successfully defended during the prior calendar year (e.g., 2015 for the 2016 award). Nominees must be current ISPP members.

Nominations and self-nominations should be submitted via email to the award committee chair. They must include a one-page (300 word) abstract, a 10-page (3000 word) summary of the dissertation, and a letter of recommendation from the thesis advisor or a committee member, all in English. The award committee may also solicit nominations through the ISPP website, ISPP News, and other means.

The committee will request a copy of the full dissertation for those selected for consideration in the second round of evaluation. If the dissertation is written in a language other than English, the full dissertation may be submitted in the original language for the second round evaluation, and qualified readers fluent in that language will be solicited to evaluate it on behalf of the committee.

Committee structure and evaluation process

In consultation with the Executive Committee, the President will appoint the Chair of the Committee prior to the annual meeting. The committee shall be chaired by a relatively junior scholar (ideally someone who has been active on the Junior Scholars Committee, or has received the dissertation award herself or himself). By the end of November, the Chair of the committee and the President will select two other ISPP members (at least one of whom should be a senior scholar) to participate in the initial screening process. For a second round of evaluation, the chair will select two additional committee members, with a view toward establishing disciplinary, geographical, gender, age, and methodological (qualitative and quantitative) balance to the greatest extent possible.

The committee will select a field of finalists from the initial pool of nominations and request one electronic copy of the full dissertation from all finalists for a second round of evaluation. If the dissertation is written in a language other than English, it may be submitted in the original language; at least one qualified reader fluent in that language will be selected to join the committee for the second stage judging. The committee will select one winner, and up to two “honorable mention” recipients, at their discretion. (The Chair of the committee is expected to inform the Executive Director and President of the ISPP before notifying the winners.)

Inquiries should be addressed to the chair of the award committee:

The Good Society: Prospects for Reason, Communication, and Well-Being

To be held at: Sheraton Warsaw Hotel, Warsaw, Poland
July 14-17, 2016

Program Co-chairs: Michał Bilewicz (University of Warsaw, Poland), Aleksandra Cichocka (University of Kent, United Kingdom), and Christopher Federico (University of Minnesota, USA)

President: John T. Jost (New York University, USA)

One of the very first political psychologists, Graham Wallas (1914) observed in The Great Society that economic industrialization had been more successful in removing specific causes of unhappiness, such as famine, than in producing genuine happiness. “We must let our minds play freely over all the conditions of life,” he implored readers, “till we can either justify our civilization or change it.” In 1937, Walter Lippmann penned his own version of The Good Society. He warned that his generation had “returned to the heresies of absolutism, authority, and the domination of men by men” and asserted that a universal sense of the inviolability of the rights and freedoms of human beings is what enabled our species to fight our way “out of the morass of barbarism” and that this inviolability must be the foundation of the Good Society.

In the early and middle of the 20th century, reformers and revolutionaries in Europe, Asia, and Latin America—inspired by socialist ideals—made an effort to improve the lives of working people and other exploited groups. In 1989, Poland led the way for a peaceful transformation that swept through Central and Eastern Europe as citizens became deeply disappointed with the authoritarian socialism they had known. Around the same time, in longstanding democracies, a consensus around social-democratic norms gave way to a neoliberal vision emphasizing market efficiency and economic individualism. Twenty five years later, it would appear that a majority of citizens in both contexts are dissatisfied with the results. In the U.S. and many other countries, politics are as destructive, bitter, and corrupt as anyone can remember, and reasoning in the public sphere seems more and more like an unattainable ideal.

What, in the 21st century, is our shared vision of the Good Society, and what are the obstacles to its realization? What is the ideal mix of equality and tradition, individual initiative and social welfare, economic prosperity and environmental responsibility, national and international unity and the cultivation of diversity? As political psychologists, what can we say about how to increase subjective and objective well-being at home and abroad? What do we know about how and why contemporary societies make it so difficult for people to communicate about these matters reasonably and realistically without rapidly deteriorating into ideological hostility or the kind of solipsistic resignation that comes with relativism about human values? In the absence of a shared conception of the Good Society, is it even possible to know what progress in social and political life would look like?

We especially welcome proposals for panels or symposia, along with individual papers and posters, which present theory and research bearing on individual and collective conceptions of the Good Society and the motivational role of those conceptions in fostering political activity. Research may draw on any area of political psychology including, but not limited to, the application of experimental designs, public opinion surveys, and narrative approaches to the study of political ideology, human values, social justice, cultural norms, personality dynamics, social identification, intergroup relations, political leadership, collective action, protest, and societal transformation. We are especially interested in proposals that provide new theoretical, methodological, or empirical insights about how to conceptualize, measure, and foster public reasoning, rationality, communication, understanding, and both subjective and objective well-being in society.

We also welcome symposia, roundtables, papers, and posters on any topic in political psychology. The program chairs are interested in bringing together new research from the fields of political science, psychology, sociology, economics, anthropology, biology, communication, history, philosophy, and other disciplines. We hope to bring about an exciting intellectual exchange that will enrich the study of political psychology and help us to better understand the dynamics of society and politics in the world today.

Confirmed keynote speakers will be Jan T. Gross, Professor of History and Norman B. Tomlinson ’16 and ’48 Professor of War and Society at Princeton University; Arie W. Kruglanski, a Distinguished University Professor of Psychology at the University of Maryland; and Diana C. Mutz, the Samuel A. Stouffer Professor of Political Science and Communication and Director of the Institute for the Study of Citizens and Politics in the Annenberg Public Policy Center at the University of Pennsylvania and a Senior Fellow in Governance Studies at the Brookings Institution.
In addition, we are planning a special session involving Janusz Grzelak, a Professor of Psychology at the M. Abstract: Building on the work of Molly Andrews, especially her recent book, "Narrative Imagination and Everyday Life" (Oxford, 2014), this roundtable discusses the importance of imagination in leading us to particular narratives that then, in turn, result in certain types of choices. Illustrations include everyday life choices, such as those concerning how we age or vote, to moral choices in political situations demanding moral courage, such as those that occur during wars and genocides.

McConochie believes, as his research suggests, that this new approach and party will lead to an agenda that is both progressive and serves the common good.
His proposal is bold and challenging, but it just might work!
—Sam McFarland, Professor Emeritus; International Society of Political Psychology, past president

PARTY TIME!
How You Can Create Common-Good Democracy Right Now
William A. McConochie, Ph.D.

A research-based exploration of dozens of psychological traits and attitudes that define liberal and conservative political worldviews and reveal how citizens with these worldviews can unite in a new form of political party to promote common-good democracy that serves citizens as members of the community overall rather than as members of competing special interest groups. 399 pages.

Available at Amazon in paper and Kindle formats.
