‘IDENTITY POLITICS AND POLITICIZED IDENTITIES. POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY IN TIMES OF CONTENTION’.

When I chose this as the theme of the 35th Annual Scientific Meeting of the ISPP two years ago, I could hardly imagine how timely that would be in 2012. Syria, Libya, Tunisia, Greece, and Spain, Occupy and the Tea Party, riots in Athens and Berlin, central squares occupied in Egypt, Spain and Tel Aviv. Our times are contentious indeed. Politics concerns the distribution of scarce resources and the working of power relations in society, and the conflicts that arise pit social groups against one another. The major players are often at opposite sides of cleavages along lines of race, ethnicity, class, religion, or language. When politicians utilize identity politics, do they then trigger the formation of politicized identities, which in turn instigate contentious politics? Or do they merely exploit existing cleavages, representing one side in a long-standing dispute thus politicizing existing collective identities? The goal of the conference will be to apply political psychology to these important questions. I will do so in my Presidential Address and so will our keynote speakers and the presenters in the thematic sessions that run through the program.

The 2012 meeting will take place in Chicago, a city with a rich contentious history. Jacquelin van Stekelenburg and Nicholas Valentino – the Program Chairs – together with the Section Chairs have compiled an exciting program featuring, not only keynote speakers and thematic sessions, but many stimulating papers. Anca Minescu programmed the chain of thematic sessions throughout the conference. They all did a wonderful job and deserve a big cheer. We hope that we have been able to bring together new findings from the various fields of political psychology and have succeeded in creating an intellectual forum in which scholars can exchange views and work towards the contribution of political psychology to the understanding of our contentious times.

Throughout the meeting keynote speakers and a chain of thematic sessions will address the conference theme, such as: Politicizing Religion, Political Motherhood, Political Impact of Political Identity, Dynamics and Consequences of Politicized Identities, Political Identities in Current Social Movements: Egypt and Iran, and Forging Identities in Different National Contexts. I hope you find this all interesting and stimulating.

All this illustrates that our Society is alive and well. This year we continue the Summer Academy (SA) which we started so successfully in Istanbul and are determined to make this a permanent feature of our Conference. Tereza Capelos deserves credit for that. You will certainly meet some of the students of the SA as they are attending the conference as well and are recognizable by their name tag. Another exciting novelty is the expansion of Political Psychology, our journal, with an annual issue with review articles named Advances in Political Psychology. Howard Lavine will be the editor of Advances. The first issue will be available in 2014. Another exciting development is our new organizational set up. As of the 1st of July we have a new full-time Executive Director, Severine Bennett. Take the opportunity to meet and talk with her while you are here.

This ISPP meeting is carefully planned by Anita Bäckman of Congrex in conjunction with Paul Nesbitt Larking (our Vice-President for conferences) and Linda Skitka from the Chicago area. They deserve our warm thanks. Chicago, a city with a turbulent history, is an ideal locale for a conference on political psychology in times of contention.

Finally, I hope to see you at one of the social events, the Opening Reception, the Awards Reception or the Junior Scholar’s Social Hour. Take the opportunity to have a drink with old friends or to make new friends and to congratulate our awardees.

I extend a warm welcome to all of you. I hope you have a wonderful time in Chicago both academically and socially. At its meetings the Society comes to live, enjoy being part of it.

BERT KLANDERMANS, ISPP President
WELCOME TO THE 35TH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY OF POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY!

We are delighted you are here and hope you enjoy the conference and your time in Chicago. At the crossroads of the United States, Chicago is one of the world’s most exciting cities. With its vibrant and often turbulent history, Chicago offers an ideal setting for a conference on political psychology with ‘Identity Politics and Politicized Identities: Political Psychology in Times of Contention’ as its timely theme. Enjoy the 2012 ISPP Annual Meeting in Chicago: the right place at the right time!

It is important to note that this conference contains a ‘thematic chain’ of panels and talks. Several thematic keynote addresses by eminent scholars have been scheduled during lunch time. In addition to the Presidential Address by Prof. Bert Klandermans, this year’s conference will feature thematic keynote addresses by Prof. Ronald Fisher of American University, Prof. Katherine Reynolds of The Australian National University, and Prof. Felicia Pratto of the University of Connecticut. In addition, Anca Minescu programmed a fascinating chain of thematic sessions on Identity Politics and Politicized Identities. Next to the thematic chain, our section chairs have compiled an exciting program featuring roundtables, paper panels and poster sessions.

We also feature several panels and events which put junior scholars centre stage, including the Mentoring Tea, Publishing Roundtable, and Career Development Roundtable. Over 500 participants have come to Chicago to exchange ideas and learn from each other.

We hope that all of you will enjoy and participate in an exciting intellectual exchange that will enrich political psychology and help us better understand the dynamics of our contentious times.

We continue here in Chicago some innovative ways to increase discussion, engagement, and the sharing of ideas that were initiated so successfully last year in Istanbul. Log on to ISPP's Facebook page to get conference updates, chat, and see videos of key presentations. In Istanbul we worked with Michael Streeter from Wiley-Blackwell, the publisher of the society's journal, to record several interviews highlighting some of the work being done by young scholars in political psychology. So if a video camera is pointed at you, don’t be shy!

Putting all of these people and ideas into a coherent program is not an easy task, yet we were extremely fortunate to have some amazing individuals working with us to create what we hope is a highly engaging and successful program. We first need to thank our section chairs who put the individual proposals into over 100 panels.

Our thanks go to Davide Morselli, Chris Cohrs, Chris Federico, Mike Wagner, Lene Aarhoe, Catarina Kinnvall, Jason Barabas, Michael Morrell, Cameron Thies, Michael Quayle, Eva Green, and Jojanneke van der Toorn. Thanks to Linda Skitka, the conference chair, for all of her work on the ground in Chicago. We were also helped by Paul Nesbitt Larkin, vice-president conferences, and the conference team at Congrex led by Anita Bäckman. A special thanks goes to Farrah Graham, from ISPP's Central Office, who never seemed to tire of responding to the thousands of emails we sent her over the year. Bert Klandermans, president of the ISPP, deserves our heartfelt gratitude for inviting us to be the program chairs and for his advice and suggestions along the way. Finally, our biggest thank you goes to Katie Brown, our assistant. Katie's help has been absolutely vital at every step of our planning process. We cannot thank her enough for all the work she has done.

Enjoy the conference and have a wonderful stay in Chicago!

FRIDAY 6 JULY 12.30 AM-1.30 PM SAUGANASH EAST

Power, prejudice, and personality:
Is progress in political and social psychology limited by a stability bias?
Katherine Reynolds, The Australian National University
In social and political psychology much effort is devoted to explanations and theories that largely focus on stability and the reproduction of existing social structures. These themes are evident, for example, in (a) the analysis of power as flowing from the top down, (b) arguments that prejudice persists because of early socialization that is deeply rooted in the unconscious, and (c) the psychology of personality as pre-determined and reasonably static. Such accounts have limitations for those focused on structural and social reform. Paradoxically this stability bias co-exists with evidence of considerable flexibility and variability in cognition and behavior. In this presentation I offer an integrated account that highlights the psychology of change as well as social stability. This analysis not only broadens the theoretical focus, it offers new opportunities to contribute to public policy and social progress. I will outline theory and research concerning when and how the political and social, through changes in the meaning of identities and associated social norms, are interlinked with personal change (e.g., personality, prejudice, well-being). The implications of this and related work for a political psychology with renewed political and practical vigor will be discussed.

SATURDAY 7 JULY 12.30 AM-1.30 PM SAUGANASH EAST

Dialectical Identities:
The psychologies of dominance, resistance, and social change
Felicia Pratto, University of Connecticut
Political psychology is fundamentally concerned with how features of people, including their psychologies, cultures, societies, and histories, influence how they enact and try to control power. However, our conceptions of power can go beyond focusing on the nation-state, beyond a focus on leaders and leadership, and beyond a focus on power-hungry individuals and groups. Arguably, much of the world does not live in nation-states, yet their societies are governed. Focusing on elites and leaders ignores the agency and the power problems of most people, including the poor. To theoretically incorporate a universal psychology of power, which accounts for power dynamics and inequality, I introduce Power Basis Theory. Power Basis Theory argues that power is pertinent to all people because it is the means of meeting universal survival needs, including wholeness, access to material resources, belonging, knowledge and transcendence. Power is not therefore just in the actions or agency of a person, but in the relationship of the person to her social and physical ecology. In social transactions, people sometimes use one form of power to gain other forms, producing power dynamics. Ethical and legal systems attempt to govern such transactions and may influence how much inequality or equality develops via those transactions. Using cross-national surveys and laboratory experiments, I show that people in structurally dominant and structurally dependent positions differ in what power actions and social rules they find ethical, in the methods of power use that appeal to them, and what they value. I also show that collective emergent outcomes of power transactions, including the level of inequality and mortality rates, result from power transactions. My talk aims to provide a theoretical scaffold for why moral psychology, governance issues, psychological processes, stereotypes and intergroup images, and collective identities provide for the dynamics of dominance, resistance, and social change.
SUNDAY 8 JULY 12.30 AM -13.30 PM SAUGANASH EAST

Fifty Years of Interactive Conflict Resolution: Applying Psychology to Polarized Identity Conflicts
Ronald J. Fisher, American University
The small group method of interactive conflict resolution, expressed mainly as problem-solving workshops, is approximately fifty years old in its application to intergroup and ethnopolitical conflicts. This address outlines the history, nature and forms of this social innovation with the focus on protracted and destructive conflicts between different identity groups, defined in ethnic, racial, religious or ideological terms.
The rationale for interactive conflict resolution is based mainly in a social-psychological analysis of escalated intergroup conflict and in social-psychological principles of interaction, both of which result in the expectations, strategies, and ground rules of the method. Despite evidence for its effectiveness, the major challenge facing interactive conflict resolution is the transfer from the individual effects experienced by workshop participants to the domains of policy making and political discourse. In addition, the diffusion of the method faces several continuing issues, such as funding, professionalization and institutionalization, not to mention concerns about cultural generalizability and cooptation by powerful actors to pursue their own policy agendas.

SUNDAY 8 JULY 5.00 PM -6.00 PM SAUGANASH EAST

Presidential Address: Identity politics and politicized identities
Bert Klandermans, VU University, Amsterdam
Over the last decades the concept of identity became increasingly central in the political psychology of protest. Collective identity, politicized collective identity, dual identity and multiple identities are concepts that help to understand and describe the social psychological dynamics of protest. In this presentation I will present a theoretical framework accounting for identity processes in the context of protest participation. I will use data from research among farmers, immigrants, South African citizens, and participants in street demonstrations to illustrate and underscore the argument. Identity processes play a crucial role in the dynamics of protest. In my presentation I will conceptualize the various kinds of identity processes that are involved: how group identification establishes the link between social identity and collective identity, how multiple identities and dual identities influence protest participation, how collective identity politicizes, and how politicization is linked to emotions. I will illustrate my argument with results from comparative research into collective action.
JSC WELCOME 2012

Welcome to the 35th Annual Meeting of the International Society of Political Psychology. This year’s event, “Identity Politics and Politicized Identities: Political Psychology in Times of Contention,” promises an array of innovative and important research from junior and senior scholars from around the world. I am pleased to announce that this year the JSC has arranged several events, which we hope you will attend.

JSC Social Hour. The JSC will host its annual social hour on Friday, July 6th at 5PM. This is a relatively informal event meant to facilitate interaction among junior scholars. The event is only open to junior scholars, which the ISPP defines as students and post-graduate scholars within eight years of receiving their degree. Drinks will be provided.

Roundtables. Two members of the JSC, Delia Dumetrescu and Lene Aarøe, have arranged two roundtables that focus on professional development and publishing in our field. Both roundtables are intended to initiate a dialogue between junior and senior scholars. On Saturday, July 7th at 10:45, the JSC will sponsor a career development roundtable entitled “Strategies for Successful and Effective Collaborations.” The focus of this year’s discussion will be the advantages and disadvantages of collaborative research. Three experienced senior scholars will offer advice regarding the advantages and disadvantages of collaborative research. The roundtable will focus on how to structure the division of labor in collaborative endeavors, when and how to negotiate and decide the order of the authors in an article, and advantages and potential pitfalls in interdisciplinary collaborations.

On Sunday, July 8th at 1:45, the JSC will hold “Publication Strategies for JSC.” Experienced scholars from the field will offer advice to junior scholars about how to strengthen their research records. Discussion topics will include: How to choose an appropriate outlet for your research, how the peer review process works, how to decide whether a manuscript is ready for submission to a scholarly journal, and how to structure your workday to maintain research productivity.

Mentoring Tea. Monica Gerber and Joanneke van der Toorn have arranged this year’s mentoring tea, which will take place on Saturday, July 7th at 5PM. For those registered for the Tea, this event provides a one-on-one interaction between junior scholars and leading researchers in the field. Mentees are encouraged to discuss their research interests and projects. After the meeting, we hope this conversation will continue. We encourage mentors and mentees to maintain communication.

In addition to this year’s event, our committee continues to manage several online services. Our blog (http://www.ispp.org/jsc/blog) and the ISPP Facebook page include up-to-date information about conferences, publications, and funding opportunities in our field. The JSC can also be followed through Twitter (@ISPP_JSC).

Finally, I would like to thank the 2011-2012 JSC for their hard work. It has been an honor being able to work with such a talented group. Finally, special thanks to all the individuals who have helped the JSC this year.

Enjoy the conference!

ROBERTA SIGEL JSC PAPER AWARD

The Sigel Award is given to junior scholar authors of the best papers presented at annual scientific meetings. Nominees must be current ISPP members.

ISPP first announced this award at its Vancouver meeting in 1996. Professor Sigel, whom the award honors, has been a distinguished professor of political science at Rutgers University since 1973. She is author and editor of seven books and many articles and book chapters, mostly in the areas of political socialization and democratic citizenship. She has had many leadership roles in the American Political Science Association and has served as program chair, Vice-President and President of ISPP.

All ISPP junior scholars who are current dues paid members of ISPP and had their paper accepted for the 2012 summer meeting/conference are eligible to be considered for the award to be presented during the 2013 meeting. JSC are students (graduate or undergraduate) and faculty who received their Ph.D. within the last eight years. Each (of the two) award carries a cash prize of $250.

There are two prizes with slightly different criteria to accommodate the authorship and publication practices in the various disciplines represented in ISPP:

• The first award is given to the best paper written by junior scholars only. In the case of multiple authors, all co-authors must be junior scholars.
• The second award is conferred to the best paper with a junior scholar first author. This award allows for a senior scholar co-author.

Please nominate (self-nominations are encouraged) eligible papers only (posters are not eligible) and submit them to the email below by February 15, 2013. Papers previously submitted to the Sigel Award are not eligible. All submissions will be read by the award committee, consisting of members of the Junior Scholar Committee as well as senior scholars. Two papers will be selected strictly according to scientific excellence and their contribution to research in political psychology.

BEST DISSERTATION AWARD ANNOUNCEMENT 2012

The International Society of Political Psychology is pleased to announce a call for nominations for the Best Dissertation Award, given for the first time at the 2008 Annual Meeting in Paris!

All Ph.D. dissertations within the field of political psychology are eligible for consideration, regardless of home discipline. Dissertations should represent an independent piece of research that is the sole work of the author and gains the highest degree at the author’s university.

Nominations are due by Feb. 15, 2013, for dissertations completed and successfully defended between Jan. 1, 2012, and Dec. 31, 2012. Nominees must be current ISPP members.

Nominations should be submitted electronically and must include a one-page abstract (300 word), a 10-page (3,000 word) summary of the dissertation, and a letter of recommendation from the thesis adviser or committee member, all in English.

Send nominations to the 2013 Award Committee Chair:
Ann Crigler
University of Southern California
acrigler@usc.edu

The award committee will request a copy of the full dissertation for those selected to participate in the second-round evaluation. If the dissertation is written in a language other than English, the full dissertation may be submitted in the original language for the second-round evaluation, and at least one qualified reader fluent in that language will be included as a committee member for the second-round evaluation.

POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY OF GLOBAL CONFLICT, PROTEST AND RECONCILIATION.
To be held at:
Program in Political Psychology and Decision Making (POP-DM)
Lauder School of Government, Diplomacy and Strategy, IDC-Herzliya, Israel

Conference Organizer: Alex Mintz

Program Co-chairs: Alex Mintz (Chair), Daphna Canetti (Co-chair), Pazit Ben-Nun Bloom (Co-chair)

In the wake of changes brought about by the Arab Spring and the waves of incipient democratic as well as radical movements across the Middle East, and debates and conflicts over the global economic crisis, including threats to the Eurozone, we hope to highlight the role of conflict and protest in precipitating change. In addition, we hope to explore prospects for reconciliation in areas of endemic or enduring conflict, and invite innovative papers dealing with the resolution of protracted conflicts among identity groups.

We particularly welcome individual papers and posters, and entire panels and workshops presenting systematic analyses of factors precipitating conflict, instigating protest or promoting peace, recovery, cooperation and well-being at an individual, community, country or regional level of analysis. We are also interested in contributions examining the intersection of protest politics and political change on the one hand, and identity politics, ethnic-religious cleavages and conflict on the other.

We also encourage papers from the greater repertoire of the psychological sciences, including social, experimental, neuropsychological, developmental, biological and genetic analyses of political decision making and behavior. Such work might explore the interaction of culture and biology in shaping the structure of political institutions, or examine the role of developmental issues, including maternal mal-nutrition or childhood neglect, which often results during times of conflict, on prospects for violence, aggression and enduring cycles of conflict. Explicating the factors which affect human prospects for achieving peace and justice are of great importance in an increasingly unstable international system. Research which examines these areas, and highlights their interactions in precipitating harmony or dissension, is particularly welcome.

Who We Are
ISPP is an interdisciplinary organization representing all fields of inquiry concerned with exploring the relationships between political and psychological processes. Members include psychologists, political scientists, psychiatrists, historians, sociologists, economists, anthropologists, as well as journalists, government officials and others. The Society is also international, with members from all regions of the world: the Americas, Europe, Asia, the Middle East, and Africa.

Benefits of Membership
- six issues per year of the journal Political Psychology;
- two issues per year of ISPPNews, the Society’s newsletter;
- reduced registration fees at annual scientific meetings;
- and voting privileges.

Political Psychology Journals from Routledge

Deadline for entries: 30th September 2012
Understanding the psychological aspects of national and international political developments is increasingly important in this age of international tension and sweeping political change. Political Psychology is dedicated to the analysis of the interrelationships between psychological and political processes. International contributors draw on a diverse range of sources, including clinical and cognitive psychology, economics, history, international relations, philosophy, political science, political theory, sociology, personality, and social psychology.
